Feminisms and intersectionalities: both imply plurality and multiplicity, offering various ways to question universalizing frames. This conference will reflect on how feminist epistemologies and intersectionality challenge hegemonic positions within knowledge production and cultural practice. Roundtable discussions with distinguished scholars and artists will explore different approaches to decentering patriarchal heteronormativity and colonizing forms of knowledge production. A Friday evening performance by Monica Palacios will feature righteous rants of nationality, sexuality, gay marriage mania and middle age flab from one of the most respected queer Chicana soloists working today.
